LEGAL QUESTION DELAYS BOND ISSUE ELECTION

Petition Must Be Presented To Board Asking For Ballot
STREET PAVING PLANNED
Traffic Question at Cutting And
San Pablo Is Again
Taken Up

A petition containing the names of twenty per cent of the voters who cast ballots at the last municipal election must be presented to the board of trustees of El Cerrito before a $65,000 bond election can be called in that city for the construction of a new city hall and the purchase of fire equipment. This was the information given the board at its meeting last night by City Attorney T. M. Carlson.

Carlson also advised the board that if it intended to carry out its plan and have the election called that the services of bond attorneys in San Francisco should be secured to check the proceedings in order that no error might be made. Such a procedure is necessary or no buyers could be found for the bonds, he declared. This service would cost the city $250. The board delayed action on the matter for one week.

The trustees were informed in a communication from the engineering department of the state highway commission, stating that permission could not be granted the city for the installation of a danger signal at Cutting and San Pablo. It was declared that such a signal would cause more harm than good and that the best remedy would be to station a traffic officer at the corner during the rush hours.

Resolutions of intention were passed for the paving of Lexington, Liberty, Central, Oak, Willow, Lincoln, Eureka and Stockton avenues.

Trustee Kurt Gray suggested that the meeting might be changed from Friday to Monday. Decision on this was delayed.

Held to Answer on Assault Charge

Held to answer to the superior court on charge of assault with a deadly weapon, was the decision rendered by Justice John Roth, at the preliminary hearing of Frank Carbone, 2427 Clinton avenue. Carbone raised $2000 bail and was released.

George Sgritta charged that Carbone attacked him while he was accompanying Mrs. Marie Delucca, mother-in-law of Carbone, and Carbone's wife to the theatre. Carbone he alleges slashed him across the face and arms. The attack occurred at the corner of Thirteenth and Barrett avenue. C. Sgritta was a roomer at the home of Mrs. Delucca. He is now entirely recovered from the wounds received.

Held on Charge of Tricking Merchant

Charged with obtaining merchandise through trickery and fraud Eugene Bennett, 20 and A. C. Corbett, 23, were arrested by local police yesterday on complaint made by Gus Allen, proprietor of a cigar store at Point Richmond.

Allen alleged that the youth substituted dice while "rolling 28" and that thereby were enabled to win fraudulently.

The youth were brought before Police Judge C. A. Odell and pleaded not guilty. Bail was set at $100 each.

FAMOUS BEAUTY ASKS DIVORCE

By Universal Service

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Washington society was greatly stirred today by the news that Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, international beauty and heiress to millions, has instituted divorce proceedings in the Paris tribunal against her millionaire husband, Senator Gerry of Rhode Island.

The wrecking of the Gerry's marital craft, after fourteen years of fair-weather sailing, came as a complete surprise even to the closest friends of the couple in the National capital. And on every hand this comment was heard: "The black pearls again!"

It was ten months ago that Mrs. Gerry came into possession of the famous Russian gems that are reputed to have exerted a sister influence upon the Romanoffs and upon all others who have owned them. They were given to Mrs. Gerry by her mother, Mrs. Mary Scott Townsend, who paid the almost fabulous price of $600,000 for them.

Declares Accidents May Be Avoided

That accidents can be avoided, was the gist of the talk made C. Agnew, Safety First expert for one of the large optical associations, at the luncheon of the Rotary club yesterday.

Agnew called attention to the work along safety lines being done by public utilities and industries, and urged that their lead be followed. Forty per cent of all accidents, he said, are to the eyes and head. In all there are a 100,000 blind people in the United States. Of these there are 15,000 that lost their sight through accidents in industry, which if proper tests had been made of their sight before allowing them to go on the job might have been prevented.

Musical numbers by Richard's orchestra helped to entertain the guests. Among the other speakers were Harry Marcus, who gave a five minute talk. Larkin Younce, manager for the Mercantile Trust company, also aided in the entertainment.

Several other petitions with the same object in view are being circulated by Mrs. J. T. Conwell and Hugh Donnelly, Dettlow says.

MANY GUESTS ARE PRESENT
Tells of Attending Conference Held Recently At Oklahoma City

It was a merry, light-hearted throng that gathered in the warmly lighted, gaily decorated banquet hall of the Builders' Exchange last night to enjoy a 6:30 o'clock turkey dinner given by the contractors and architects of the exchange to the rest of the members of the organization.

Denny Shaw's orchestra added to the enjoyment of the occasion by several well played popular selections. This along with songs by Archie Winchelo, the singing plasterer, and Laid Johnson, who also led the community singing, gave the guests an excellent program of entertainment.

The principal speaker of the evening was Charles Gompertz, president of State Builders' Exchange, past president of the San Francisco Builders' Exchange and one of the original organizers of that body, which is one of the oldest in the country.

Gompertz spoke of the good work being done by the Richmond Builders' Exchange through the cooperation with the industrial associations throughout the state. He said that much good had been done in settling differences that arose between employees and employers, and in this way accomplished a real public service. Because, he said, the public is the worst sufferer when industrial disturbances and strikes are inflicted upon a community.

Throughout the state, wherever he went, he heard a good word spoken for the Richmond Builders' Exchange, and for their efforts to promote amiability between the worker and employer.

On his travels he attended the American plan conference held at Oklahoma City. At this conference there were representatives from all over the United States, and much good work was accomplished.

Among the other speakers of the evening were Mayor Platte, City Attorney Hall, P. M. Sanford, president of the local exchange, Chief of Police Dan Cox and E. W. Shaw, secretary of the Alameda County Builders' Exchange.

Approximately 125 were present at the affair, including members and guests. The hosts of the evening were Contractors, Norman E. A. F. Carson, A. Fagerstrom, A. H. Farrell of Dennis Construction company; K. J. Heming, A. W. Josselyn, The Miner company, Carl Overaa, L. V. Perry, A. L. Rector, S. B. Robertson, P. M. Sanford, W. Snelgrove, M. S. Serpa, Joe Tandy and Chris Theis, J. C. Thornton, Waring and Pin; Architects James T. Nabrett and Ernest Flores.

The dinner was served by a committee of ladies from the Presbyterian church, who prepared the meal in the exchange kitchen. On the committee were Mrs. J. S. Spires, chairman; Mrs. R. Slattery, Mrs. W. W. Bullock, Mrs. H. C. Bowman, J. H. Platte, F. Wagner, R. Haig, W. L. Walquest, A. L. Rector, Miss Myrtle Spires, Mrs. Bonquet and P. M. Sanford.

MELLON PLAN TO BE REVIVED

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Encouraged by the "vote of confidence" they obtained at Tuesday's election, which gives them a working majority in both House and Senate, Republican leaders today indicated they will revive the Mellon tax plan, which was defeated in the last Congress.

With that end in view, Republican Congressional leaders intend to ask the President to call an extra session soon after he is inaugurated for his new term, beginning March 4, 1925.

At the White House, it was stated by a spokesman for the President this afternoon that no immediate plans were being laid for an extra session soon after the inaugural ceremonies.

Since the election the President has had several conferences with Senator Smoot of Utah, chairman of the finance committee, and it is known that the advisability of calling an extra session to revive the revenue laws was under discussion.

TRADE WITH MEXICO

Senor Calles, the president-elect of Mexico, says that prospects for trade between Mexico and the United States are excellent, and it will be his policy to do all in his power to expand commerce between the two nations.

In 1914 our trade with Mexico totaled $120,000,000 of which $86,000,000 consisted of imports from that country. In 1923 the trade between the two countries totaled over $260,000,000, an increase of about 117 per cent, imports that year reaching $140,000,000, and exports $120,000,000, or nearly three times the 1914 record. This was accomplished in spite of the fact that conditions in Mexico, from the political and commercial standpoint.

The bulk of our exports to Mexico consist of manufactured goods, iron and steel manufactures machinery, etc., figuring largely. But we are also shipping to that country large quantities of agricultural products, including grains, meat and dairy products, and the like. Inasmuch as Mexico is largely agricultural, the time is not far distant when, given an orderly government, the Mexicans will raise most of their own foodstuffs. In late years Mexico has been a large buyer of American locomotives, cotton manufactures, automobiles, chemicals, leather and rubber goods, soaps, glassware, silks, and fish products. Probably 60 per cent of our imports from that country consist of petroleum products. Next in importance is sisal, from which binder twine is made. Other important items are raw cotton, copper, coffee cane sugar, and bananas. Lead and zinc are also important items.

In its natural resources, and in the variety thereof, Mexico is far richer than Canada, and we are doing a business of considerably over a billion dollars a year with our northern neighbor. Those who have surveyed Mexican resources say that with the sole exception of Russia, she is the richest undeveloped country in the world. Providence has given Calles and his people their opportunity. It remains for them to make the most of it. The United States has for its motto in its relations with the Latin Americas, Paz, Comercio y amistad—peace, commerce, and friendship. We are living up to it.

NEIGHBORS

The election is over and the electors have spoken. The people now will resume their normal paths of trade and commerce, home-life and community associations.

Except for isolated cases no rancor remains. It has been a quiet, and more than usually clean campaign. Things have been done and said which have hurt, but many of them were results of the heart of passion and not of deliberate conception. The Record-Herald repeats that it is glad the election is over and the country can resume its ordinary life. Out of this battle ballots there should be no disabled veterans. It is different from the battles which often decide elections in less enlightened countries where the sense of personal subordination to the majority will is not as strong as it is in the United States of America.

After all, the people who decide these questions are all neighbors. There is a mutuality of interest which averages elections, even though this is an immense country, filled with diversified elements.

The fact that we shall continue to be neighbors, and can continue so, speaks well for the orderly processes by which our country is guided.

ONLY SEVEN 5-4 DECISIONS

In the fore part of the political campaign just closed, the radicals were vicious in their attacks on the United States supreme court and the state courts, and their chief issue was for nullification by the congress of decisions of the supreme court which declared acts of congress unconstitutional. The "five to four" decisions of that court were anathematized, and the people were told that the court was against them.

As a matter of fact there have been but seven "five to four" decisions in 135 years. Furthermore, there have been but 48 decisions declaring acts of congress invalid, and 19 of them were unanimous. Seven were made with but one dissenting opinion; ten with two, five with three, and, as stated, seven by a five to four decision.

There is not much in all this to justify the radicals in changing the system to one which would make congress both a legislative and a judicial body, and constitutional decisions a matter of two-year duration.

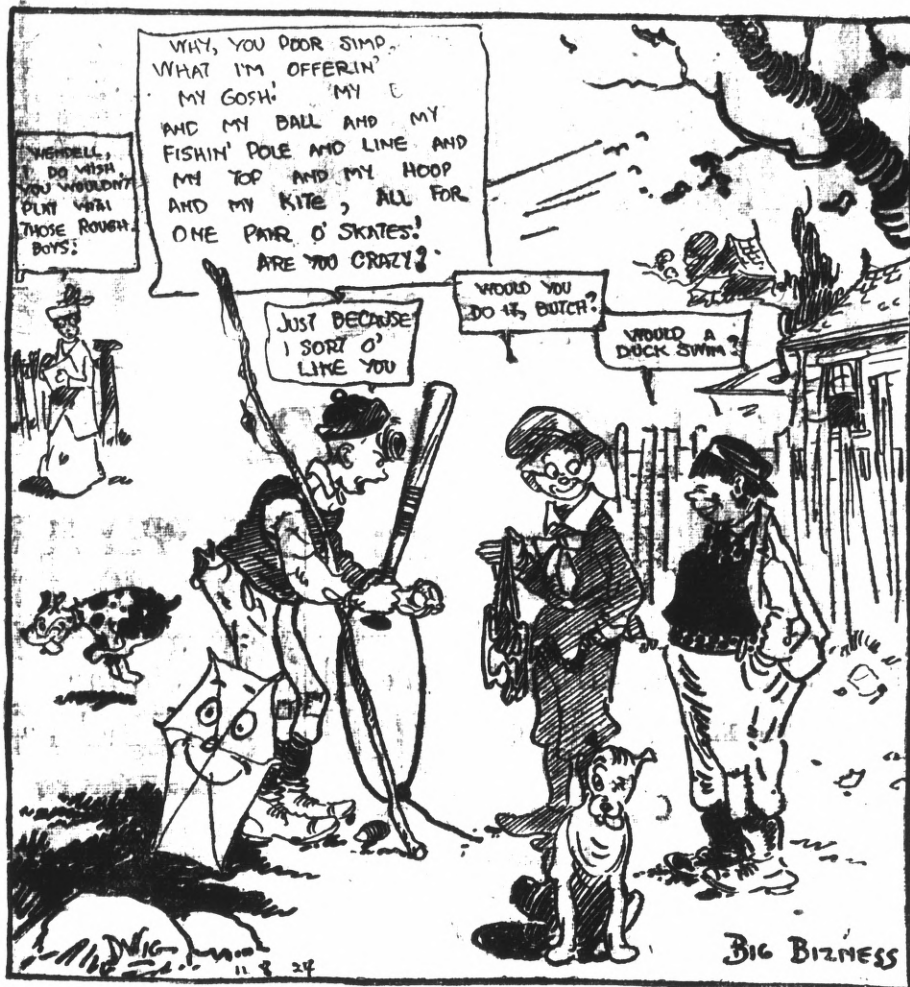

A French inventor is running around patting himself on the chest because he has made, after thirty-six years of effort, a perpetual motion clock that runs without attention as long as it lasts. It weighs a ton and a half. We would rather have a wrist watch and take all the trouble of winding it up.

When you speak of a "go-getter" you think of a square-jawed, broad-shouldered, capable looking brute of a man. But the really efficient "go-getter" is the ailing or the tearful wife.

The Turban Shape Wedges Its Way Into Favor When Smart Women Choose Their Hats.

WHILE CROWNS are as big as can be and a new hat is apparently known from an old one by the height of its crown, a few brave spirits of fashion have had the temerity to wear hats with no crown at all. One of the most talked about bits of millinery news during the autumn was the fact that Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt when in Deauville, France, started the fad for evening hats, and one of the most striking of these new evening hats was a crownless turban—that is, a turban without a top. It was made of silver tissue, finished in front with a shield of silver and black enamel.

It is sometimes difficult to know where the line is drawn between a sure enough turban and a small hat. Some of the new turbans might almost be described as small berets. The turban as we know it was of course originally inspired by the masculine headdress in Muslim countries. The word itself is derived from the Turkish tulbent. In the East the turban is invariably made by winding a shawl or scarf around the turban, or, for some reason, we should restrict the term turban to small close-fitting hats that are draped. In the early nineteenth century when turbans were worn in abundance by fashionable women they were always lavishly draped—enormous, imposing head-dresses that remind one of domes of Moslem mosques.

The turban of today is of modest proportions and sometimes there is no drapery about it. Suzanne Talbot sponsors an odd little peaked turban would all around about with wide metal brocade ribbon which is drawn up to the top where it is tied in a jaunty little gaby bow. Caroline Reboux is the author of an interesting turban, suggestive not of the turbans of the Orient but of the turban headdress worn by East Indian negroes—skillfully draped from gay bandanas. Reboux drapes hers in much the same way, substituting plain or forced velvet for the varicolored bandana.

Lewis gives the turban effect in a small hat on which black crepe is draped upward in a peak in front with a rhinestone ornament at the apex, while feathers spread out like a fan across the front above the black crepe.

FURS YOU KNOW
Practical Po-Sum

"POSSUM meat am good to eat, and 'possum fur likewise am good to wear. It is only recently that this durable and attractive American peltry has been appreciated and valued as highly as it certainly deserves. Oddly enough it was Europeans who first taught us Americans to appreciate this native American fur. The opossum sport coat is now a rival of the racoon sport coat or the undyed muskrat coat. These three furs, ranking high in durability are appropriate for the three-quarter coat or jacket that every young woman wants to possess at present. Now opossum fur is used for coats, for suits and coats as well as for entire coats.

An expert on furs says that it is possible to dye and 'top blend' opossum to imitate stone marten; it is possible for it to be 'dye and topped' to look something similar to Russian fish; dyed and topped to resemble German fish; dyed and topped to look like fox, or wolf; dyed black to imitate black skunk; or fox and dyed and topped to imitate natural skunk. Aside from these imitations," he adds, "The American opossum skin is a pretty good all around fur!"

BITS OF KITCHEN WISDOM
When Kettles Burn

It sometimes things burn in pots and kettles, fill the receptacle with cold water and let it stand for awhile. Then gently remove what-culity. Then gently remove what-ever can be removed without difficulty. Don't scrape and scour. Now fill the dish part full of cold water and add a lump of washing soda and bring to the boiling point. Usually this treatment frees the dish of most of the burn without wearing its surface as scouring does.

GOLD LEATHER AND BLACK SUEDE

Striking belts are made of black suede with buckles covered with gold leather, and sometimes with other decorative applications of the gold leather.

The Husband Tamer

By VIOLET DARE

AUTHOR OF "The Half-Time Wife," "The Luxury of Love" etc.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

PATRICIA CLEVE has become estranged from her husband, ANDREW CLEVE, who seems to feel that his young wife exists only to help entertain his business friends. He goes abroad, after Patricia has insisted that she will live differently or leave him. She visits her sister, CAROL WILLOUGHBY, and finds herself enrolled to help Carol's husband, KEITH WILLOUGHBY, in his efforts to interest

GREGORY HEWITT, a famous financier, in his affairs. Hewitt falls in love with Patricia, and for Keith's sake she cannot refuse to join a western camping trip arranged by him.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT

XL—FATE TAKES A HAND

It was an ideal day for riding, and as the four of them started out on the sure-footed ponies, Patricia noted with pleasure that luncheon packs had been strapped on the saddles.

"What a glorious day for a picnic!" she remarked, noting as usual how thoughtful Hewitt was and how well his plans always coincided with her wishes. "Why can't men always carry on their business in this lazy, pleasant way?"

Hewitt laughed at the suggestion as Keith laughed seriously in a lecture to Patricia on the importance of business. Keith and Carol, real children of the city and strange to out-door activities, shambled along slowly and seemed to be clinging for dear life to the saddles, but Patricia, glad or her many canyons in the park in New York, rode easily, and noted that Hewitt was perfectly poised in his saddle.

"I feel quite like a part of a Bill Hart picture," Patricia chuckled; "but these donkeys seem to be any villain around for me to be saved from."

"And you look like the Rue de la Paix, or at least a riding scene in the Folies," Hewitt observed gallantly. "These old plains would have to brush up on the New York fashion if you were to stay long, and I would have to send for a copy of the what the well-dressed man will wear when serving hard-boiled eggs on the desert to a lady fashion plate."

Their conversation, keyed to nonsense, rambled on and on with never a note of seriousness, for which Patricia was grateful. Why couldn't friendships always be like that, Patricia mused, weary of trying to drive herself to make a decision.

But after they had eaten the appetizing sandwiches and drunk the coffee in their little thermos lunch kits, and the others had wandered away in search of a spring where they could water the horses, Hewitt turned to Patricia and asked earnestly: "What is your decision? Do we go on to Mexico tomorrow? There is no going back, you know, no real going back? You would never be happy again as you were. And I can offer you everything—money, position, endless devotion."

Patricia jumped to her feet angry that he should take advantage of this opportunity to press his suit when he had started out to go so kind, to evade the issue that faced them.

"Oh, I can't, I can't!" she cried out, and running to her pony she swung into the saddle with a graceful jump and galloped off toward camp alone. The pony hesitated at first, starting into an easy trot, but she loosened her reins and urged him on and on until she broke into a swift gallop that seemed fleet as the wind and carried her as a kite of stones and holes.

It was almost a mile toward home when the others caught up with her, and it was Hewitt who first saw with a shock that she had been thrown and that the pony was limping back and forth beside her prostrate form as though he wanted in some way to help.

"Pat, Pat," he called, his voice gruff with anguish as he hastily dismounted and came toward her.

Expertly he raised her and supported her shoulders against his arm. Carefully he unlaced her boots and stretched her feet out until a cry escaped her. "Stop, stop," she begged of him. "It's there, my right foot. Oh, I can't stand it, the pain—"

Pat was lying there unconscious.

She sunk back into his arms, her face pallid and drawn.

"Must be a break," Hewitt told the others in curt anxiety as they came up; "or a bad sprain, anyway. Ride over there toward the road Carol as fast as you can. It's about time for the men to be coming back with the wagon of supplies. Tell them to wait. Keith and I will carry Pat there."

Pat was only vaguely conscious of what was happening to her. Occasionally she regained consciousness only to find herself being carried along toward some unknown destination. Then she felt the strong, steady hands loosen under her and a bumpy jerky wagon take their place; but always she was conscious of a stern, anxious voice cautioning the driver to hurry, but to make the journey as smooth as possible.

Later there was a strange house—a sort of cabin—and new voices. "She was thrown from her horse," she heard in explanation, and then no more until the firm hands of a doctor seemed to reach down and straighten the tangled mass of bones in her foot.

And though she dimly heard the soothing voice of Hewitt trying to comfort her, she realized then that it was not his she wanted to hear.

WHERE IT STARTED

ENAMELLING

This art, whose origin is very ancient, was first practiced by the Egyptians and the Babylonians. The art of enamelling was introduced into Europe by the Romans under Justinian. The Chinese did not take it up till later, during the Christian era. In Western Europe, the Celts showed the greatest skill as enamellers, and Ireland gave the art its lease on life in that district.

"Border Legion" Featured Today at California

"The Border Legion," a Paramount picture, is the latest offering of the popular novel with Antonio Moreno and Helene Chadwick in the principal roles, is the feature at the California theatre for the last time tonight. The story was adapted to the screen by George H. W. Williams Howard directed the production, his first for Paramount.

The story is the second of Paramount's widely-advertised "Famous 40" by this author to reach the screen. The other was the natural-color picture, "Wanderer of the Wasteland," shown at the California theatre some time ago.

By talking "Wanderer" as a standard of comparison, one would think that "The Border Legion" would suffer. To the contrary, it is better, if anything.

Moreno has the role of Jim Cleve, a young cowboy, who quarrels with his sweetheart, Joan Randle, (Miss Chadwick) and just to show her a thing or two he goes off and joins the Border Legion, a bandit gang which terrorizes the country, murdering and plundering in its raid on gold-miners and towns. The girl, repenting, goes in search of him and is captured by the leader of the gang and brought to his shack back in the mountains. Cleve sees her and arranges her escape when the men are on a raid in town. The girl is recaptured and Jim shot and left for dead on the side of the road. He turns up unexpectedly at the cabin and turns the tables on the outlaws.

Reckless Fellowes has the role of the bandit chief in the picture and Gibson Gowland is his lieutenant. Charles Ogle plays the rancher-victim of the Legion. Others in the big cast are James Corey, Edward Gribbon and Luke Cosgrave.

Albert Macgillivray, the sweet tenor, will appear for the last time tonight.

Other features on the same program include Hal Roach's latest laugh creation "Every Man For Himself," featuring those lovable little rascals "Our Gang"; International News; Larry F. Canelo at the organ.

THESE FOUR SISTERS DIDN'T HAVE TO CHANGE THEIR NAMES WHEN THEY MARRIED FOUR BROTHERS

Left to right in the group shown are Mr. and Mrs. Otis P. Stonesifer, Mr. and Mrs. Lester E. Stonesifer, Mr. and Mrs. William G. Stonesifer and Mr. and Mrs. Harry R. Stonesifer. Four Stonesifer brothers married four Stonesifer sisters. The families, who live in Hanover, Pa., are not related although their names are identical. William and Ida Marcella Stonesifer started the family marriage hall rolling in 1915. Two years later, Harry and Gertrude married and just two years after that Lester and Joanna were joined in wedlock. The youngest of the brothers waited until September 22 last to go to the Rev. J. W. Reinicke, who performed the ceremony for the other Stonesifers. There is still work for Cupid to do as there are two unmarried Stonesifer brothers and sisters.

Third Fire Victim Is Found in Bay

Discovery of a third body floating in the bay near Bay Point yesterday cut to four the number of men reported missing in the disastrous fire of last week, which consumed the Associated Oil Company tanker Alden Anderson and the concern's Avon wharf.

The body has not yet been identified but it is possible that it is that of Jesse W. Towner, oiler, whose father, John Towner, came from Naco, Ariz., in the hope that his son's corpse would be recovered and he could accompany it to his home city. A body mark leads to belief that the remains are those of Towner.

Captain A. Engalls, master of the Anderson, has been called from San Francisco by Deputy Coroner J. F. Brunscher of establish identification. John Towner went to San Francisco yesterday.

Recovery of the body makes three bodies that have been recovered since the disaster. The body of Nelson Bouchard was shipped today to Fall River, Mass., by the Brunscher parlor. No disposition has been made of the body of John Crowford, first to be discovered.

The tanker Anderson is still burning slightly with the majority of the hull under water.

Berlin Garages to Stop Street Parking

By O. D. TOLISCHUS
BERLIN, Nov. 7.—Municipal auto garages numerous enough and large enough to accommodate all the autos in Berlin, so that in future the parking of cars in the streets will be prohibited, is the plan being debated in the Berlin city council as one method of solving the city's traffic problem.

The economic recovery of Germany has progressed far enough to make this problem acute, though Berlin is still the only city in Germany so far that knows of such a thing as an auto traffic problem.

Profiting from experiences of other world cities who had to face this problem long ago, and wishing to avoid the drawbacks of some of their haphazard solutions, the Berlin council is going at it with typical thoroughness.

It is proposed to found a stock company in which the city itself would have the controlling interest and to which would be given a monopoly of all garage as well as storing and gas filling facilities in Berlin. The oil companies would be forced thus to deal in the Berlin territory only through this company, which would regulate prices according to quality.

The aim is to systematize the business, put in on a uniform charge basis, and above all to clear the streets of all parked autos, even though Berlin's streets are wider than those of any other large city in the world.

City Folk Want Romance

By O. D. TOLISCHUS
By Universal Service
BERLIN, Nov. 7.—Marriage as an institution is still good enough in rural communities and in the country, where people are more primitive. For the modern metropolitan man and woman, however, marriage is possible only as a romance.

That is the view of Professor D. K. Dunkmann, as outlined in a speech before the "League for Marriage Reform" in Berlin recently.

The institution of marriage is justifiable in the country, said Professor Dunkmann, because man has part of the soil to pass on to later generations and because his greater primitiveness makes it endurable for him.

But for the modern city men and women, turning more and more into mere bundles of nerves, such marriage of utility is not endurable.

Duke and Duchess of York As "Health Test" Tourists

By Universal Service
LONDON, Nov. 7.—Arrangements have been nearly completed for the forthcoming visit of the Duke and Duchess of York to British East Africa and Kenya Colony.

Special interest attaches to their tour because it will be undertaken largely to test the ability of the tropical climate in case it should be decided later to appoint the Duke as governor of some portion of the Empire lying within the tropics.

The royal party will leave this country during the first week in December, and will travel in a P. and O. liner to Mombasa. Thence they will by the Uganda railway as far as Nairobi, the headquarters and seat of the Government of British East Africa. They are expected to arrive there on December 22.

On December 26 they will start a ten-days' tour of the principal places of interest in the neighborhood. During this period the Duke hopes to have his first experience of big game shooting in the game reserve that extends over ten thousand square miles. If he is fortunate he may be able to bring a lion down although these beasts are not so plentiful as they were formerly.

On the conclusion of this expedition the Duke and Duchess will return to Nairobi, whence they will continue their journey up the Uganda railway as far as Uganda itself. They will be the first members of the Royal Family to visit that country.

They are expected to visit Port Florence, on the shores of the mighty Victoria Nyanza, the largest sheet of fresh water in the Old World. Here they will take a steamboat cruise and will visit the headwaters of the Nile, while an expedition is also planned for them to the beautiful Ripon Falls.

The Duke and Duchess would like to halt in Egypt as they travel home wards, but much will depend on the time at their disposal, and, of course, the internal condition of the country. Should this visit take place, however, the royal travelers will proceed to Luxor and the Valley of the Kings in order to inspect the tomb of Tutankhamon.

It is expected that they will be home again at the beginning of February.

St. Bernard Monks To Build a Modern Hotel For Tourists

By BASIL WOON
By Universal Service

PARIS, Nov. 7.—The monks of St. Bernard have finally come to the conclusion that somebody has been playing them for suckers.

Since time immemorial the St. Bernard monks have been famous for their hospitality to Alpine pass, extended board and lodging free of all charge to weary travelers passing by.

Came a day, however, when a modern road wound across the mountain, and tourist companies never failed to advise automobilists to be sure not to miss the St. Bernard.

From a few guests a week, the monks were called on to serve dozens every day. Still they did not complain. But the limit was reached when a tourist outfit at Grenoble acquired five large auto-trucks and began running two excursions a day to the monastery.

Even then it might not have been so bad had the tourists given up their share. But the little contribution box placed inconspicuously near the entrance never outweighed the large sums the monks were forced to spend for food for their guests.

A tourist would arrive in automobile, accept a bed at the monastery, eat a hearty breakfast and luncheon, and on the way out he'd notice the contribution box.

"Oh, well," he'd say, "these people are good chaps; we'll give 'em something."

And then, out of the generosity of his heart, he'd throw maybe a five-franc piece into the box. Sometimes it was two francs. Sometimes one. Sometimes the tourist passed out looking the other way. And the cost of the tourist's bed and meals was never less than twenty franc for the monks.

So now the cackled fathers, whose mission it is to succor, aided by their famous dogs, mountaineers lost in the Alps, have got wise. And they're going to build a modern tourist hotel as an addition to the monastery. And when the cheap tourist arrives next year he'll find a hard-faced professional hotel manager ready and waiting for him.

They'll get the same service and food as of yore. The monks will do the cooking and the waiting as always. But the hard-faced manager will collect the money, and the prices will be what would be charged elsewhere.

A worm turns sometimes, and there are limits to what even a monk will stand.

French Electoral System Remodelled by Parliament

(By Universal Service)
PARIS, Nov. 7.—France is about to change her electoral system, and a bill to effect the necessary alteration is now before the Senate.

Some years ago France adopted a form of Proportional Representation—a system of "Lists" compiled by each party or "bloc," every elector having as many votes as there were vacancies to be filled.

The country is now to return to the old form of single-member constituency, with a provision of a Second Ballot held a fortnight after the first.

That this reform should be brought about by a Socialist Government is interesting; and equally interesting were the reasons for it put forward by M. Caillaux, a pre-war Premier, who after a chequered career, was freely mentioned as candidate for the Premiership after the General Election last May.

"If England adopts any form of Proportional Representation," he declared, "she—and especially her Liberal Party—will regret it."

"Proportional Representation means stagnation, combined with increase of reactionary power. It allows of no freedom of movement either for the party or for the individual. This we have found out in France, but we are not as afraid as you would be to remedy it. They have found it out, too, in Belgium, where 'P. R.' has killed Liberalism."

Mr. Caillaux's words were endorsed by M. J. L. Malvy, a former Minister of the Interior, exiled to Spain during the Poincare regime, and now Socialist Deputy.

"When he spoke M. Malvy had just headed the poll in a municipal election in his native town, and pointed out, with a wry smile, that it had taken over three hours to count the papers of 624 voters."

"But then," he added, "nobody in France expects an election result under 'P. R.' to be declared less than 24 hours after the closing of the poll."

This Don't Mean You

Did any of our readers ever notice how independent some public servants seem at times, how surly they seem to treat their equals, just as much as to say, "who are you, that you dare speak to me. Please remember that I am your superior in every way, shape and form. I would be pleased if you would not recognize me when you meet me, etc." Now this is not what they really say, but rather what their actions seem to say. Well, there are some such fellows, that are living out of the public trough, that act just that way—and you and I, dear readers, are filling that trough from which they are eating with our taxes, donations, or otherwise, and we sometimes think that we deserve some recognition from our hirelings. They all know us before election, all right, but soon after they forget that we exist. With all due respect to all public servants, and thankful that the very small percentage are in the foregoing class, we wish to say that in a sense we are all public servants, and simply because we are not getting paid out of the public funds is no reason we should not do our duty in a public way. And remember that there is more than one printing office in Richmond, and the Record-Herald believes in the welfare of the community, and all of its undertakings, and is willing at all times to lend a helping hand to all things conducive to public advancement.

High School Play to Be Given Friday

The "Hottentot," one of the most successful comedies ever produced on the stage or screen, will be given by the Richmond Union high school, under the direction of Miss Gertrude Woodard, the dramatic coach, at 8 o'clock Friday evening, November 14, in the Roosevelt Junior high school auditorium.

Tickets will be placed on sale at Martin's Grill, Tenth and Macdonald avenue, on Monday. Anyone wishing to see the performance is urged to purchase their tickets early if they wish to obtain choice seats.

The "Hottentot" is an amusing recital of the adventures of a young man, who is deadly afraid of horses, and who through the force of circumstances and his love for a girl, is made to ride the "Hottentot," one of the most dangerous horses in the country.

The fun comes when Sam Harrington, the hero, arrives at the home of a famous racing owner on Long Island, New York, and is taken for another man by the same name, who is a famed jockey. He is about to divulge his identity, when he learns that his hoped-for fiancée, Peggy Fairfax, is very fond of horses and believes him to be the jockey. This is too much for him, and with the help of the butler, Swift, who is also afraid of horses, but who tries to hide the fact from others, he attempts to learn to ride. In the trying times that are his, and with every one about him talking of nothing but horses, he exclaims in disgust to the butler, Swift, during one of their hurried conversations: "This is not a home. It is a lively stable."

Everyone who attends the performance is assured of a hearty laugh, and much keen enjoyment.

Novel Marriage Experiment Tried

(By Universal Service)
NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—An Experiment in scientific marriage designed not only to improve the race but to preserve the dew of love's rose, is the basis of the wedding of Walter Kingsley to Francesca Carmen.

Mr. Kingsley, press agent for Kiehl's and former continental man to Flo Ziffler, married Miss Carmen, then a premiere danseuse in Morris Geat's productions, two years ago.

Only a few intimate friends knew of the marriage until two days ago, but not until tonight was it learned the union was a scientific test which eclipses that of the charming Fannie Hurst and J. S. Danielson, the pianist.

Success already has crowned the experiment in eugenics, because the couple have a chubby, fair haired baby girl, who in her ninth month equals in healthy physique, a child twice her age.

Conditions on which the experiment is based are these:

The happily married couple maintain separate apartments. Mrs. Kingsley keeping the infant with her. Each has key to the other apartment, with the understanding that be or she may visit the other only when the spirit urges.

Each retains the friends of single life. Mrs. Kingsley is at liberty to entertain or accept invitations from former admirers, while her husband enjoys the same privilege.
